

ARIZONA DEPOSITORY LIBRARY COUNCIL MEETING MINUTES

Date: Friday, November 1, 2002

Location: Hayden Library, Arizona State University

Attendees: Susie Acton, Susan Beard, Mark Bartlett, Sean Evans, Janet Fisher, Mollie Gugler, Julie Haase, Pat Headlee, Julie Hoff, Bonnie Lopez, Kathy Little, Hillery Oberle, Priscilla McIntosh (CIS/Lexis-Nexis), Camille O'Neill, Martha Portree, Atifa Rawan, Linda Risseuw, Denise Shroyer, Dan Stanton, Brad Vogus.

Jan Conrow, Associate Dean of University Libraries, welcomed the group to ASU and Brad Vogus, on this first day as Head of Government Documents and Maps, thanked us for coming.

Brad Vogus called the meeting to order.

There was one correction to the Minutes of the May 3, 2002 AzDLC meeting. On the second page, the Yavapai College bond amount was $69,500,000 not $69,500.

Announcements:

AZLA is going through a transition. Round tables are now called interest groups, i.e., GODORT is now GDIG. At the December meeting, Dan Stanton will be taking over from Brad Vogus with Sean Evans as Vice-Chair. New officer orientation will be November 15. The conference will have 2 sessions per day: including Jerry O'Donnell on Census 2000 and update SF3; Brad Vogus and Sean Evans on government information post 9/11; Linda Risseuw on Cool Stuff – for Kids and Teachers; and Dan Stanton on Arizona local government and resources for finding information. AZLA newsletter will be published every other month.

Old Business:

Updates from Depository Libraries:

Sean Evans reported budget cuts at Northern Arizona University, but that documents are still coming in and being processed. He also reported that the dean has retired and NAU will have an interim until a search can be completed.

Dan Stanton, Arizona local documents librarian at Arizona State University, reported 5 position vacancies, 4 librarians and a specialist.

Mark Bartlett, Head of Technical Services at ASU law library, reported that the budget will not affect documents processing. They are working closely with ASU Hayden library to catalog documents and are working on bibliographic record problems. Their gate counts have increased. The computer services department has done away with free printing.

Julie Haase from Grand Canyon University is involved with a serious remodeling job that is almost completed. She reports that it has made the atmosphere much nicer. She is also doing retro-cataloging. The library is not having budget cuts and is, in fact, getting more money.

Camille O'Neill, reference librarian from Arizona Western College, is in learning mode. She took over from Pam Blome.

Bonnie Lopez from Apache Junction Public Library said their library is moving to a new online catalog and is trying to get some items into the catalog.

Susie Acton of the Northland Pioneer College, Winslow campus, has been in her position for three months and is doing a government document inventory.

Martha Portree of NAU reported an increase of patrons at the reference desk, a coffee bar opening in the library, and government document DC-ROMS on the shelf ready to circulate.

Pat Headlee of NAU bibliographic services mentioned the retro-cataloging project for government documents.

Kathy Little, documents librarian at the City of Mesa Library, reported a 10% cut, the loss of 3 people in reference and the expansion of the East Mesa branch.

Mollie Gugler of Yavapai College in Prescott reported a flat budget with the library shifting emphasis from books to electronic databases. Their building projects include a new library on the Verde Valley campus and a new library and computer room for the Prescott campus. The college president did not approve the plans so they are working with one of the vice presidents. They will be a metadata site for Yavapai County to provide business and training opportunities.

Julie Hoff who works in the state library map collection told us that paper topographic maps are not going away. The USDA, Forest Service has money to update their maps. The Tonto National Forest will be next to have a complete revision.

Janet Fisher of the Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records told us that they have plans for a 10% cut just in case it happens but have not been told yet. They are moving the law materials and services back to the state library. She also reported that she and Inspector Robin Haun-Mohamed have visited the University of Arizona, Arizona Western College, and Tucson Pima Public Library. No inspections are coming up. Eighty percent of the patrons using the collection at the state law library are public citizens.

Linda Risseuw of Phoenix Public Library reported a 20% budget cut over 2 years. They currently have no deputy director and will cut branch hours. They have trained 5 more librarians to work the documents desk. They should have their backlog taken care of this summer and are experiencing an increase in use.

Atifa Rawan has finalized the GIS project. University of Arizona has moved all pre-1920 federal documents to special collections and asked for one time funding to catalog them. University of Arizona is mourning the loss of three nursing faculty and have received threats to the library.

Hillery Oberle, map archivist at ASU, reported that the project to move the maps from Noble Science Library to Hayden has been postponed for now. The reasons: too expensive, too many shelves to move, and too many security issues.
